CRESTLINE BRIDE-TO-BE DIES IN CRASH

Auto Collision Near Bucyrus Turns Wedding Into Funeral, Fiance Loses Arm.

Death last night ended Wednesday wedding plans of Miss Clarabelle Corbin, 30, and William King, 20, both of Crestline, when Miss Corbin was instantly killed and King critically injured in the crash of their auto and a truck heavily laden with steel.

The tragedy occurred on U. S. Route 30-N, two miles west of Bucyrus, and was one of 11 traffic accidents injuring 13 persons in the Mansfield area over the week-end

State highway patrolmen of the Marion post said Miss Corbin was thrown through the windshield of an auto driven by King when it crashed into a detroit-Pittsburgh Motor Freight company truck parked partially on the highway west of Bucyrus at 9:48 p. m. yesterday.

The truck had broken down and the driver, Kenneth Little of Canton, had placed lights around his vehicle, patrolmen reported.

Arm Amputated.

Almost the entire upper part of Miss Corbin's body was crushed, resulting in instant death, it was said. King suffered a punctured lung and crushed right arm. He was taken to the Bucyrus hospital where his arm was amputated, this moring. King's condition today was critical.

Miss Corbin, who operated a beauty parlor in Crestline with her sister, Mrs. Edwin Wagner, was to marry King Wednesday. She was born in Wyandot county, Nov. 26, 1915 and lived in Crestline for the past six years.

Surviving besides Mrs. Wagner are her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Corbin of Wharton, another sister, Mrs. Bertha Slemmer of

End of Use Near For Camp Shanks

CAMP SHANKS, N. Y.—(INS)— The vast emptiness of Camp Shanks echoed to marching feet for the last time today as the remnants of 300,000 German prisoners of war were formed in ranks for departure to their homeland.

When the 1,385 Germans leave, Shanks and its hundreds of buildings sprawling over 2,090 acres becomes a ghost town. From it more than 1,300,000 Americans went overseas. Other hundreds of thousands returned to it for staging for separation centers or assignment to hospitals.

Legislature Starts Rent Study Tonight

COLUMBUS — (AP) — The Ohio legislature was scheduled to begin its second special session of the summer tonight (at 8 p. m.) to consider rent control laws, but already there were indications nothing would come of the gathering.

In calling his second extraordinary gathering in less than a month, Gov. Frank J. Lausche said he would ask the solons to enact temporary legislation effective only until superseded by federal action.

Over the week-end house and senate conferees in Washington agreed on a bill to continue Office of Price Administration regulation, including a full resumption of rent price control. A vote on the measure was expected by tomorrow.

DEFER ACTION

Ashland Authorities Fail To Move Against Bird Killer.

ASHLAND—C. S. Hoffman, law director, said today that the city was deferring all action against a suspect who has been poisoning birds in the northeast portion of the city.

Citing Ohio statutes, Hoffman said that only the killing of song birds was in direct violation of the law. To date only dead sparrows and starlings have been brought into city offices for examination.

Sparrows and starlings are not considered songbirds, he said. More than 65 birds have been found dead in the Twelfth street area.

MT. GILEAD—Maj. Garland E Taylor, 39-year-old Army Air Force officer attached to AAF headquarters in Washington, D. C., escaped by parachute when his army trainer plane ran out of fuel and crashed in an open field nine miles west of here Saturday night, Marion state highway patrolmen reported.

The major, en route to Dayton from Bolling Field, Washington, D C, reported he had consumed his supply of fuel in trying to avoid a storm center and so could not fly as far as Dayton, patrolmen reported.

Officers said Maj. Taylor "bailed out" near Waldo and his plane came to earth three miles farther away. No one was injured.

Sun Yat-Sen's Widow Raps Brother-In-Law

Warns U. S. That Chinese Reactionaries Hope to Promote Yankee War Against Russia.

SHANGHAI — (AP) — Madame Sun Yat-sen, widow of the founder of the Chinese republic and sister-in-law of its present leader, Chiang Kai-shek, said today in a rare interview that a desire to promote war between the United States and Russia motivates Kuomintang (Government party) reactionaries seeking to stir up civil war. Inactive in politics for years, she came out of semi-retirement to urge immediate establishment of a coalition government in the country now headed by her brother-in-law and to appeal to the United States to foster such a move by cutting off all military supplies to China.

Madame Sun said that Kuomintang reactionaries were fostering a civil war they can't win "because they hope civil conflict in China will incite war between America and the USSR and thus at last crush Chinese Communists."

"The American people, who are allies and long friends of China must be clearly told of this road to disaster," she said.

NANKING—(AP)—Chinese Communists claimed a resounding victory today with the capture of 12,000 troops, threatening the whole government position on the vital coastal plain only 60 miles east of Nanking.

HINTS RELEASE

BERLIN—(U.P.)—The case of two missing American officers was wide open again today as Gen. Joseph T. McNarney hinted at unexplained plans to bring about their release. McNarney, U. S. commander in Europe, said steps designed to free Capt. Harold Cobin of Newark, N. J., and Lt. George Wyatt of Oklahoma City were "under consideration."

BIKINI CLOUDY

Conditions Unfavorable For Underwater Bomb Test.

ABOARD USS APPALACHIAN, BIKINI — (INS) — Weather conditions appeared unfavorable today for holding the underwater atomic bomb test Thursday morning (Wednesday afternoon, U. S. time).

Vice Adm W. H. P. Blandy said, however, that his weather experts were hopeful that a high pressure area moving down from the northeast would drive away an inter-tropical front which has covered Bikini lagoon with towering clouds and brought occasional showers.

The Operation Crossroads chief said in an interview aboard the press ship Appalachian that easterly winds at all altitudes up to 20,000 feet and a cloud cover of not more than three-tenths are needed for the test.

CANTON —(INS)— Three-year-old William Creek was dead today as the result of a fall from the rear door of a car driven by his father, Arthur The father said the boy evidently pushed the door handle down as the car made a turn on State Route 153, two miles east of Canton.

BLASTS KILL 8 IN JERUSALEM

Two Explosions Rip British Military Headquarters in Holy Land.

JERUSALEM —(INS)— Two thunderous explosion shattered British military headquarters in Jerusalem today, killing at least eight persons and injuring some 50 others in an apparent renewal of bloody warfare by underground extremists

(The London Evening Star, in a dispatch from Jerusalem, said at the precise moment the second explosion ripped through the hotel headquarters of the British military, an unidentified man called the Jerusalem telephone exchange and said:

("We of the Jewish resistance movement have just mined the King David Hotel in pursuance of our military plan.")

Additional victims were believed trapped in the wreckage of the five story building, which housed other offices of the Palestine government.

One unconfirmed report said a number of senior British government officials were killed in the tremendous blasts

Eyewitnesses said four or five armed men entered the basement of the King David Hotel, in which the British military headquarters are located, and placed the explosives on the floor.

Sunday Crowd Estimated At Over 75,000

10,000 Autos Counted As Day-Long Caravan Brings Throngs To Historic Aerial Event On Its Second Day.

Ninety-five thousand people saw the thrilling two-day sky show at Mansfield's municipal airport over the weekend.

More than 10,000 automobiles swarmed to the port yesterday afternoon. Hundreds of people went by bus. Scores used motorcycles and bicycles. Some even walked.

In all, there were 75,000 persons at the 1,200-acre airfield yesterday—almost quadrupling Saturday's total of 20,000.

For almost six hours from 11 a. m. until 5 p. m. a double line of autos crawled bumper to bumper from the edge of the city out North Main street road to the scene of the sparkling aerial exhibit.

Other streams of autos converged on the port via the Olivesburg road. By actual count 10,000 cars were parked at the airfield. Thousands more stood in private parking lots and along highways which gave a view of the sky-stage miles from the airport.

The vast throng which swarmed over the port was orderly with one exception At 4 p. m. about 1,000 persons became angered when they attempted to leave the field and were temporarily blocked by in-coming traffic. They swarmed around Traffic Commissioner Frend C. Boals and Corporal John L. Bishop, Highway Patrol, demanding egress. Reasons ran from sick babies and fainting women to one lady who said she "had to go somewhere to play a pipe organ," Boals reported.

The situation was cleared by shunting arriving autos into the official parking lot and reversing the flow of traffic on North Main street.

Drivers reported that it took them on an average of one hour to drive the four miles from the center of the city to the port. Many cars became overheated from driving in low year and had to pull off at the side of the road.

Traffic kept moving steadily all day however. There was a minimum of confusion. Return traffic was expedited by one-way use of roads leading to Bowman street.

All cars had cleared off the parking area by 7 p m

Features of yesterday's "second act" were, again, the 70 top-ranking military planes which took part in the air show and were displayed on the ground

It was the concensus of officials and "second-time" spectators that Uncle Sam's flying boys actually outdid themselves for yesterday's show.

"Even better than the first show," was the comment offered by most who had witnessed the Saturday performance.

As the thousands watched, in carnival spirit munching wieners or eating ice cream, the army's biggest and fastest combat planes again drew gasps from gaping crowds

B-29 Stunts.

The giant B-29 Superfort, whose "brothers" just a year ago were pounding away at Japan, actually zoomed and dived and brought comments of "impossible!" To stunt that 65-ton craft WAS almost impossible, the crowd thought—until they saw it for themselves

But, as during the first day the army's P-20 Shooting Star stole the show Many people came from far and wide just to see that

PORT LIVES UP TO SAFETY TAG

275 Planes Use Airfield For Two Days With Only Two Minor Accidents.

Mansfield Municipal airport lived up to its advance billing as one of the safest ports in Ohio during the two-day Sky show. There were no accidents Saturday and only two minor ones yesterday with approximately 275 planes using the port.

L. H. Watkins, flying a Piper Cub out of Barberton suffered a possible strained back when he pancaked his small plane at 1:30 p. m. Sunday in the large field adjoining the southeast section of the airport.

Airport officials said that the tall weeds caught the undercarriage of the light plane and caused it to nose over when Watkins approached the southeast runway.

Still on the field today was the United Airlines "Mainliner" which was grounded after she suffered minor damage to her tail assembly as she was being towed back from her exhibition position to a point where she could safely swing about.

The big ship rolled into the towing tractor and slightly damaged her elevators.

Manning the ship was an all Ohio crew.

Clifford Reidel, Cleveland, first officer, not only received his flight training at the Mansfield port in 1941 but he remained there during 1942-44 as an instructor for Harrington Air Service. Dwight Terrell, Newark, captain, also received his early flight training at the port in 1941.

OHIO POLICE MEET

CLEVELAND — (AP) — The Fraternal Order of Police of Ohio opens its 12th annual conference here today In addition to current crime problems and prevention methods, several business sessions of the three-day conference will be devoted to discussion of betterment of police standards.

GRATEFUL FLIERS PUT ON 'SUPER SPECTACLE'

Grateful for the hospitality shown them by Mansfield the fliers in yesterday's sky show really outdid themselves.

Thousands of spectators who attended the second day performance witnessed what was probably the most spectacular military and naval air show ever seen by any single crowd.

Many in the throngs who left the first day feeling that the army, navy and marine fliers couldn't have put on a better show were thrilled yesterday to see them outdo their performance on the opening day

It is unlikely that any crowd has ever witnessed on the same show what was almost a stunting B-29 "Superfort," and a P-80 "Shooting Star" in aerobatic maneuvers.

The "Superfortress" had the crowd gasping as they watched her swing several almost vertical arcs and then swoop to buzz the field, stand on her tail, and climb upstairs at a speed that seemed hardly believable for a ship of her great size.

In what was also an unusual treat for the thousands of air enthusiasts, the swooshing roaring, jet-propelled P-80 flashed through the sky in aerobatic maneuvers that have seldom been witnessed by an airshow crowd

So far ranging was the "Shoot-

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, July 23.

With the energies and spirit of initiative and enterprise stimulated to high purpose and enduring objectives, with a concentrated effort to put over large and lasting programs it would be well to adhere to routine decisions and the obvious and tested methods of operation, since left to the mentality itself there might be some temptation to diffusion, scattering, or beclouded issues

Hew to the straight line and adhere to the systematic course for safety and future security

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a lively and enterprising year, in which efficiency, shrewd analysis and a well-organized course of action previously mapped out, should bring concrete and definite culminations.

The urge for labor, diligence, perseverance should not be permitted to scatter, lag, or be diffused by any sort of brainstorm or sweep of obscurity or contention. Strict adherence to plans and systems may accomplish major aims

A child born on this day may have great energy, executive ability and exceptional skill for large objectives although at times its snap judgments or obscure slants away from high purpose may defeat it

HIDES STORIES OF MIHAILOVICH TRIAL IN GIRDLE

Akron Writer Visits Sky Show, Tells of Trip Through Balkans.

By MARGUERITE MILLER

Among the press personalities attending the weekend dedication ceremonies and sky show at the new Mansfield airport was Helen Waterhouse, war correspondent and aviation editor, who returned two weeks ago from the trial of Gen. Draja Mihailovich.

Concealed in her clothing were the stories of the trial, which she had been unable to send because of "security reasons," and in her purse was the ornate silver and gold cigaret case of the former Chetnik leader, who died before Marshall Tito's firing squad at dawn last Wednesday.

"Being the only American woman covering the trial, I was watched constantly," the tiny, energetic woman began. "I never dreamed that conditions were as bad as they were until I got there.

"Most of the time I was afraid to send anything to my editor, so the only way I was able to get the stories out of the country was to wear them in my girdle. By keeping the cigaret case in my purse I was able to escape with it."

The Chetnik leader died after being convicted of charges of treason and collaborating with the Germans, and after appeals of mercy had been turned down by the presidium of the Yugoslav parliament.

The cigaret case, presented to the leader by his rifle squad in 1939, was bought by Miss Waterhouse for 35 American dollars.

"That's a small fortune in Yugoslavia," she said. "Their dollar is worth practically nothing and our $35 will keep one person supplied with funds for a long time."

Following her coverage of the trial, Miss Waterhouse obtained an exclusive interview with Pope Pius in Rome.

"The Pope was interested in conditions throughout the Balkans. He seemed very moved when I told him what I had seen and heard."

From Athens, Greece, Miss Watterhouse returned to Washington. She is a member of the staff of the Akron Beacon-Journal.

Things Few New Yorkers Know About New York: One of the town's most picturesque streets is Milligan court. It is tree-shaded and you enter it via a wooden gate. . . . The holes in the rocks at Inwood Hill park were made by glaciers ages ago. . . . At Washington place and Seventh avenue six streets intersect. . . . The reason for the ancient barred window in the edifice on Duane street: It was used by the British as a prison during the Revolution. . . . Barren Island (in B'klyn) looks like a scene from "Tobacco Road." Unfortunates there live in rundown shacks. . . . Rich veins of precious stones are stored deep in Manhattan's soil . . . Foundations for skyscrapers are almost as deep as the edifice is high. . . . The Music Hall's foyer contains the world's largest mural. . . . Tin Pan Alley flourished during the nation's earliest days. One of the first smash hit ditties was "Yankee Doodle." . . . New York theater history began two centuries ago. During the first few years of the thittir's existence critics and thespians settled their disputes—by fighting duels.

In the shadow of Murray Hill's stone and steel towers there is a blacksmith, complete with forge, anvil and all other necessary tools. . . . There is a cemetery along Second avenue that hasn't a single tombstone. . . . One hotel in Manhattan caters to farmers only. City slickers are barred. . . . Only a few blocks from midtown's smartest residential sector is a farmyard where you can buy live chickens. . . . Those caves in Central park where children now play were once Indian homes. . . . Hitching posts used during the Big Burg's horse-and-buggy era can still be found in various parts of the city. . . . Gas lamps still flank the entrance to the homes of former mayors. (Why, daadee?) Years ago the mayor was also a magistrate, and it was often necessary to locate his house quickly at night.

Main Stem movie temple lounges are dimly lit for psychological reasons—it tends to make people speak softly. . . . Large hotels have fully-equipped rooms for emergency operations. . . . On Rivington street you can still find an ancient milestone showing the distance from city hall. . . . There is a lighthouse on Manhattan Island—at Fort Washington Point. . . . An outdoor marriage altar can be found at Waverly place. The altar features painted mosaic graces and is set in a charming garden.

A statue erected in honor of a dog (Balto) can be found in Central park. . . . An 18th century clapboard building is surrounded by modernistic tenements at Mt. Morris park is one of the last relics of the old Volunteer fire department. . . . One fact underlines Harlem's disgraceful living conditions: More than 4,000 people live in a single block. . . . About 50 per cent of the tenements condemned as unfit for human habitation after the Civil war are still standing. . . . New York's shortest street is Edgar street. . . . It hasn't a single number.

How the Little Church Around the Corner was christened: A century ago, a curate at a nearby church was asked to officiate at the funeral of a famed actor. He refused, adding that "perhaps the little church around the corner might be willing to serve." . . . The tree standing at 131st street and Seventh avenue is Harlem's Tree of Hope. It is supposed to bring good luck to any person who rubs his back against it. Oh, sure. . . . A strange epitaph is inscribed on a tombstone in the Trinity church cemetery: "Ha, Sydney, Sydney! Lyest Thou Here? I Here Lye. Till Time Is Flown to Its Extremity." . . . The hansom cab is named after a Britisher, Joseph Hansom, who invented it. . . . The stone wall at 190th street and B'way was originally erected as a fortification during the Revolution. . . . New York's oldest place of amusement, with the longest continual run) is the Central park carousel. It started spinning a century ago.

NEW YORK—The contrast between the professions and the performances of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt has been drawn in a series of revelations, the most dramatic being his active participation in the bilking of John Hartford and David G. Baird who had loaned $250,000 to his son, Elliott, and the unsuccessful attempt to bilk Charles Harwood of $25,000 by representing that his collateral was worth only 2 cents on the dollar. It has been shown further that the president, who had damned holding companies, used three holding companies and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in an elaborate scheme to provide that an estate adjoining his own at Hyde Park should not fall into the hands of "undesirable" neighbors.

As to generosity by employers toward employes, President Roosevelt left an emphatic record in speeches and documents which invited an assumption among his followers that he, himself, was extraordinarily liberal. His will, bequeathing only $100 each to his personal employes out of a millionaire's estate, suggested inconsistency, the more striking in view of the great value of the philatelic treasures which he left, most of which were a profitable and questionable by-product of the presidential office.

Moreover, it is a fact that in his old home neighborhood of Hyde Park, Mr. Roosevelt was not unanimously or even generally regarded as a liberal employer.

Historians undoubtedly will weigh evidence of contradictions in the character of Mr. Roosevelt, however shrilly his followers today may object to the introduction into the contemporary record of material which otherwise might be lost.

In 1936, when Alf Landon, of Kansas, opposed Mr. Roosevelt as the Republican nominee, the Republican National committee prepared a broadcast in which Dr. J. M. Cronk, of Hyde Park, a country doctor who had then been in general practice there for 38 years, was to have been the star witness.

Dr. Cronk had regarded Roosevelt as a selfish and snobbish boy and, in that broadcast, which was not delivered, but the original script of which still exists, he was prepared to say: "Mr. Roosevelt is not known here, among his neighbors, as a good neighbor. There is plenty of reason. We know the way he treats the people who have worked for him. Mr. Roosevelt does not have the reputation of a good employer.

"We in Hyde Park know that Mr. Roosevelt calls himself the friend of labor. I don't want to sound cynical, but we don't judge him by what he says when he is talking for votes but by what we know of him right here. We hear a lot about social security these days. Let me tell you about an old man, a very old man here in Hyde Park. His name is Myron Husted. Mr. Husted is in his 89th year. He worked on the Roosevelt estate for 23 years. For the last five years he has not worked at all.

"Seven years ago, when Mr. Husted was in his 82d year, and after 21 years of service for the Roosevelts, his pay was cut to one dollar a day and the old man had to walk more than two miles each way, to and from work, and then put in a day's work to the best of his ability. For two years he faithfully plodded back and forth, rain or shine, to earn his daily dollar.

"One rainy night, five years ago, on his way home from work, Mr. Husted fell and sustained an injury. He never returned to work. He requested a small pension from the Roosevelt family to help sustain him in his last years. He did not get it, although it is the custom of the big estate owners up the river to pension their old and faithful employes."

In closing, the script said Dr. Cronk had hesitated to take part in the radio interview but finally decided it was his duty to help other people to know Mr. Roosevelt as his neighbors knew him.

Other affidavits in the accompanying sheaf said Roosevelt paid $2.25 for a nine-hour day for laborers as against the local rate of 40 cents an hour or $3.20 for an 8-hour day.

Twenty-four hours after he was interviewed at his office in Hyde Park, Dr. Cronk expressed apprehension that his grandson, recently discharged from the army, employed as a guard at Roosevelt's grave, and a son-in-law, employed on a semi-public project in the neighborhood, might become victims of political reprisals, even though Roosevelt is dead.

He said he warned a representative of the Republican National committee in 1936 that the New Deal would make it impossible to buy radio time for the interview. And this, he said, was the reason why it never was broadcast.

A Republican worker assigned to that job at the time recollects, however, that the Republican National committee got cold feet, tried to get the Jeffersonian Democrats to take the responsibility and finally killed it off themselves.

FRANKFURT—(AP)—So-called intellectual circles in impoverished postwar Germany have come up with a new political plan for Europe—one which they claim is designed to "free the continent of American and Russian influences," a U. S. military government report reveals.

The plan amounts to a call for a "Europe for the Europeans." Its vaguely federative tinge foresees an economic union of western Germany, France, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg, the report said.

The key motive of the plan is said to be a growing German desire to "free Europe from foreign domination," based on a strong feeling that Europe now is just a "meeting place between Communist Russia and Capitalist America."

The report said, however, that no authorized political party in western Germany at present has anything officially to do with the proposals. "The parties recognize the project could be said to smell of a western European bloc against Russia," a military government official observed.

German intellectual circles, which the report said stand either outside the parties or on their fringes, claim however that they are interested only in restoring European independence. They think somewhat like this:

"They see in the disastrous end of the war shattering proof of the futility of all attempts by a single European nation to organize its economy independently of other nations, even though it may succeed temporarily in political conquest," said the report.

"They acknowledge that as a result of the war the Europeans have lost control of the European continent. The real rulers of Europe, they maintain, are the United States and Russia.

OPA READY TO MOVE BACK IN

All Signs Point to Approval By Congress and President of Compromise Bill.

WASHINGTON —(INS) The nation probably will be back under full rent controls and limited price restrictions before the week is out.

Every indication pointed today to approval by congress and President Truman of a compromise price control act that will restore OPA until June 30, 1947.

House-senate conferees met today to put the finishing touches on the new bill and sign the conference report. It will be acted upon by the house tomorrow and the senate soon thereafter.

Although the president did not advise the 14 conferees whether he would sign the bill or veto it again as he did the last OPA extension measure, he dropped a hint which indicated his approval would be forthcoming.

Mr. Truman informed the conferees that he would be given overall authority to restore or terminate price controls within the next year.

It was understood that he would send to the senate this week for confirmation the names of two Democrats and one Republican who will compose the independent board. Each will receive $12,000.

Police Probing Attack Report

Police today were investigating the report of a criminal attack on a 16-year-old North Diamond street, late Saturday night.

Glider, Near Crash of Its Tow-Plane Sidelight Show

Here are some of the highlights and sidelights on yesterday's sky show at the new airport:

Twenty-five-year-old Frederick Tietzel, Ohio State university student and civilian instructor at the army glider school there, showed what can be done with a engineless, propellerless glider plane. Towed up to an altitude of 4,000 feet by a bi-plane, Tietzel cut his slender-winged ship off the tow rope, and came down doing graceful loops, rolls and spins, bounced over an obstacle and brought the little ship to a perfect landing.

Probably the most anxious moment of the whole afternoon was the split-second escape of a bi-winged Stearmen plane from a squadron of navy "Hellcats" simulating straffing manuevers over the field. The little plane, which had towed Tietzel's glider over the field, was run out of the west by in-coming navy planes. Heading back for a landing before the Marine Corsairs were due, the pilot ran directly in front of the low-swooping powerful fighters. There was a moment when no one breathed. The little plane nosed down, the navy nosed up. The crowd caught its breath and the navy resumed their interrupted formation, while the pilot settled his plane on good old earth.

By 2 p. m. one ton of wieners, ordered by Ed Sutter, chairman of the concessions for the airport show, had been consumed. A half-ton of the meat had been eaten by Saturday's spectators.

Six thousand, eight hundred pounds of Washington state cherries, flown in on a National Freight Lines chartered plane in the morning went like "hot cakes" in a hungry crowd. The chartered plane was piloted by members of the famous, "Flying Tiger" division. The cherries sold for 65 cents a pound.

START CLEANUP AT CITY PORT

Street, Park Department Men Clean Up Litter Left By Giant Crowd.

The big job of cleaning up Mansfield's new airport got under way early this morning when 20 men, five trucks and a tractor-operated lift from the street and park departments moved onto the field.

Charles Hebel, street superintendent reported today that it will require part of the day tomorrow to complete the job, of cleaning up after the 75,000 people that jammed the airport for the dedication ceremonies and skyshow.

Concession stands were also being torn down today to restore the port to its former neat uppearance.

CANCEL TOUR

Dissatisfied Shelby Councilmen Await Mayor Long.

SHELBY — Inspection tour of the municipal water works Saturday by city councilmen dissatisfied with the superintendence of J. P. Adkins was postponed because of the absence of Mayor Frank Long, with whom the council has filed a resolution asking that supervision of the municipal water and light companies be divided.

The councilmen say that Supt. Adkins who heads both companies, has been lax in his inspections of the water plant and that inadequate equipment is being used to filter city water. Mayor Frank Long has the matter under advisement but as yet has taken no steps to split the civil service job which pays $383.33 per month.

PEACH CROP GOOD

Mansfielders fancying peaches and cream for breakfast or for dessert should have little trouble in appeasing their appetites with luscious Ohio-grown peaches this season, as reports from Clyde indicate a fine crop. Ben Davis and R. B. Harnden, representatives of the Clyde Peach Growers association reports a plentiful peach supply this year at Clyde orchards, some of which will be trucked into Mansfield.

THEY SHALL NOT PASS—

When the Mansfield police force is told to enforce rules and regulations they carry out their orders! Throughout the weekend, the Sky Club restaurant at the airport was closed to all persons not having dedication or sky show credentials. Even J. Gilbert Baird, chairman of the dedication committee and master of ceremonies for the aerial exhibition, and Mrs. J. R. Harrington, wife of the restaurant manager could not pass on "face value."

Baird tried to get past the guard without a badge Saturday, couldn't make it, and had to get a guest card before he could get inside for the luncheon!

Yesterday Mrs. Harrington ate wieners for lunch because she did not have the necessary identification to get in the restaurant her husband manages.

RIPS TALMADGE

Pearson Says Georgian Will Aid Ku Klux Klan.

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) Flanked by a corps of policemen, some 1,500 persons last night alternately cheered and booed Commentator Drew Pearson as he declared that Governor-Nominate Eugene Talmadge had promised to install a Ku Klux Klan official as head of the Georgia bureau of investigation.

Pearson charged over a national network that Talmadge had pledged to a KKK grand cyclops that "all race problems will be left to the Klan."

Speaking from Georgia's capitol grounds, Pearson said that Talmadge would appoint Grand Cyclops Sam Roper of Klavern 297 in Atlanta to head the GBI, a statement that drew cheers from the crowd that stood in a light rain during the broadcast.

2,000 KILLED, WOUNDED IN 4-DAY REVOLT

Students, Labor Unions Take Lead in Uprising, Pledge Full Civil Liberties.

LA PAZ, Bolivia—(AP)—Revolutionary leaders promised immediate restoration of civil liberties today after seizing the government in a bloody four-day uprising climaxed by the assassination yesterday of President Gualberto Villarroel.

Street fighting, in which approximately 2,000 persons were reported killed or wounded, abated after the revolutionists paraded through La Paz with the battered, semi-nude body of the president draped over an army tank.

The situation was still confused today as the leaders of the revolt attempted to restore order after one of the most chaotic days in the history of this country, where revolutions are taken almost as a matter of course.

Some members of the army and a few of Villarroel's lieutenants managed to escape the angry civilian mobs and flee to the hills.

The new government is composed of university professors and students, labor union groups and several prominent figures including the dean of the La Paz superior court.

Restores Liberties.

First official act of the revolutionary regime, which calls itself the "Institutional government," was to issue a communique calling for national unity and restoration of "popular liberties," which were suspended under Villarroel's "strong man" rule.

The communique also said that all political prisoners would be freed and that all political exiles would be welcomed back in Bolivia.

The president was captured within the palace and then—either dead or alive—was hurled from a balcony to a mob in the street below.

The crowd tore his uniform into shreds and strung him up on a high lamppost.

Several of his lieutenants and members of the palace guard were hung on other lampposts in the square.

Then Villarroel's body was cut down, placed atop the tank, and paraded through the streets as proof that his regime had toppled.

Civilians, forming military ranks, marched through the city shouting their support of the revolution. Trucks loaded with women picked up the dead and wounded.

Luis Uria, undersecretary of the presidency, was among those hanged in front of the presidential palace. Roberto Hinojosa, director general of propaganda, was killed. Police Captain Hunberto Carrasco was arrested.

The current revolution began July 13, when a student was killed during a demonstration in support of teachers' demands for higher pay. The government then prohibited all demonstrations, and a general strike was called in protest of this action.

Fifty persons were killed and 250 wounded last Thursday when police fired on a crowd of demonstrators.

Gave Up Too Late.

Realizing that his regime was wabbling, Villarroel reorganized his cabinet Saturday, forming an all-military body. When this failed to halt the revolution, he resigned yesterday morning and prepared to flee the country.

However, student leaders, who had amassed a large number of arms during the night, threw up barricades around the presidential palace and moved in for the kill.

Most of the army units which Villarroel had hastily assembled in the capital during the last several days refused to defend him.

Nestor Guillen, dean of superior court, assumed the role of acting president, but said in an interview that he would retain that post only until Tomas Monje, court president, was well enough to assume office.

Guillen said he and others in the revolutionary junta "form only a provisional government to call elections and then turn over power to a government chosen by the people.

Villarroel had served as president since Dec. 20, 1943. He came into power following a revolution in which an army group overthrew the government of Gen. Enrique Penaranda.

Profit Probing's Expensive Game

WASHINGTON —(AP)— The cost of war investigating hit the Mead committee today.

HUGHES IMPROVING

LOS ANGELES —(INS)— Continued improvement was reported today in the condition of Howard Hughes, who was critically injured in the crash of an army experimental reconnaissance plane. Hughes was given his seventh blood transfusion and fluid was drained from his crushed left chest cavity for the third time.

Mansfield Takes Legion Junior District Tourney

IN THE SPORT LIGHT by

Hal Clawson

I've been to big athletic events in Cleveland—baseball and football games down around the huge municipal stadium — and some of the biggest football crowds at Ohio State during the past few years, but I've never seen anything like the crowd here yesterday.

And leave it to me to get caught in the worst of it.

However, my only consolation about the whole matter is that there were several thousand with me.

From the time we started from the square until we had parked the car at the port, ONLY two hours and 10 minutes had elapsed.

A cronological listing of our maneuvers goes something like this:

At ten minutes 'till two, we were at the stop light on the east side of the square.

Two o'clock—Finally arrived at light on north side of square and started down Main street.

Two-twenty — Cop ordered the inside lane of traffic in which we were driving to turn through the alley at the Holly Shop to N. Diamond.

Two-thirty-five — Got out of line and pulled into the filing at the corner of Diamond and Sixth for oil and water. Needed one quart of oil and some water. Edged back into line of traffic at Sixth street and at 2:45 we turned back on to Main street.

Two-forty-eight We were sitting right in the middle of the railroad tracks hoping that no train would come along about then.

From here on the trip was uneventful. Simply a process of stop and go for the remaining three miles.

There were possibly a hundred or so cars which boiled over and had to pull over to the side of the road. Hundreds of others simply gave up and decided to watch the show from along side the road.

Just about every other car had its hood up including a couple '46's. Under those circumstances, I'm quite proud of the way our car stood up.

This morning I learn that some people spent even longer getting away from the port than we did getting to it.

But what tops it all is this: I know three people who left after we did and were at the airport while we were still up at the square.

It pays to know these short cuts (with due apologies to Freed Boals and the rest of the officials who did a great job of keeping the traffic moving).

Beats Wadsworth and Fremont at Norwalk

Frisbee Turns In Four-Hit Job In Finale; State Meet Next.

NORWALK—Climbing on the swat band-wagon for 10 runs in the last of the fourth, Mansfield rolled over Wadsworth, 10 to 2, here yesterday afternoon to annex the American Legion Junior district baseball championship for the second straight year.

The Mansfield youngsters will compete with 13 other district titleholders in the state tournament beginning next Monday at Delaware. Manager Dewey Durant goes to Delaware Sunday for the tourney pairings.

Ross Frisbee had another of his good days against Wadsworth as he turned in a sparkling four-hit mound job and recorded an impressive skein of 15 strike outs. The chunky righthander got into trouble only in the third frame when the losers pushed both their tallies across the platter.

Don Smith pitched Durant's nine into the finals by beating Fremont 7 to 5 aided by timely hitting. Smith allowed only eight hits but tired rapidly in the last frames.

Mansfield ran up a 7 to 1 lead in the seventh inning but Fremont scored two in the last of the seventh and two more in the ninth to hand Smith a scare. Sheldon Swank had two singles and a double to pace the batters and drove in the first three Mansfield counters.

Seven of Mansfield's 12 hits figured in the second game's big burst. Red Worthley had two singles, W. Miller, Frisbee and Ryder contributed doubles and Meeting and Swank each singled in the giant frame. The seven safeties combined with a walk and hit batsmen and two fielder's choices to account for the 10 runs.

The Wadsworth contest marked the fourth straight contest that Frisbee has rung up 15 whiffings. He walked four.

Jim Meeting was the hitting star in the finale with three singles.

McCarthy Rates As Popular Favorite In Ohio Amateur

By JOHN BARRINGTON
(INS Sports Writer)

LIMA, O.—The familiar name of Maurice McCarthy drew popular favor at Lima today on the eve of the Ohio Amateur golf tournament, but not all the "smart money" was backing the Cincinnatian.

Tomorrow the tourney—being held for the first time since 1942—gets underway with an 18-hole qualifier. Wednesday, 64 survivors will begin match play over the Shawnee country club course. Finals will be played Saturday.

McCarthy, a tree-time winner of the state amateur crown, ranked as favorite chiefly on the strength of being the only "name" player in the tournament. Conspicuously absent were Frankie Stranahan of Toledo and Bobby Servis of Dayton.

Stranahan won the event in both 1941 and 1942. Frankie has since become a big leaguer, what with being touted as the "best amateur since Bobby Jones." So Stranahan is committed to the lush Tam O'Shanter all-American at Chicago.

Servis is a four time Ohio amateur champion. In face he and McCarthy were annual rivals throughout the 30s. Bob won in 1933, '36, '39 and '41. Maurice, campaigning out of Cleveland in the earlier days, was first in 1934, '37 and '38.

Annually, the tournament seems to present a ripe opportunity for some comparative "unknown" in the field of nearly 150. McCarthy has been strictly a "business man golfer" in the past few years and seems to be past his peak.

Except for a victory in the 1944 Ohio open, McCarthy hasn't recorded any really important victories lately. He recorded a four-over-par 292 in the recent 72-hole Columbus Invitational, and a week later was second at Dayton's Moraine Invitational.

McCarthy's challenge may come from the ranks of the hundred or more private club players who will compete. It may come from among the 21 public links golfers invited to the tourney.

One darkhorse will be Jim Stout, Lima city champion, who has the advantage of playing over a familiar course. Stout will be playing on a non-resident Findlay country club membership.

A Cleveland trio—Harold Paddock, jr., Eddie Meister and Tom Whiteway will be strong contenders. Paddock was low amateur in the recent Canadian open at Montreal. His 286 was three strokes better than Stranahan's 72-hole total. Meister was runner-up to McCarthy in the 1937 state amateur.

Leedy Snuffs Out Late Rally To Give Grays, 7-6, Triumph

GREENWICH — Merle Leedy struck out the side in the last of the ninth to enable the Mansfield Grays to chalk up a 7 to 6 victory over the Greenwich Merchants here yesterday afternoon.

Leedy tired in the late innings as he pitched the Grays to their eighth victory of the season. He was invincible for five frames but the Merchants piled on for four tallies in the sixth to tie up the contest.

However, Mansfield came back in the seventh to push home three counters. Greenwich scored one in the eighth and had runners on second and third with one run across the plate in the ninth when Leedy applied the brakes.

The Mansfield hurler permitted only seven blows and whiffed 11.

Bogantz paced the Grays attack with a brace of doubles while M. Smith of Greenwich contributed three safeties.

Indians Cling To AA Lead

(By Associated Press)

Indianapolis clung to a one-game lead in the American Association struggle today after splitting a Sunday doubleheader with its arch rivals, the St. Paul Saints, in a couple of the most fantastic scoring games of the season.

In the opener, the Tribe was cruising along with a 5-0 lead entering the eighth inning when the Saints piled over four tallies, three on Eric Tipton's homer; tied the count in the ninth, and then won, 8-5. Indianapolis took the nightcap, 12-8.

The Louisville Colonels kept on the pace—only 1½ games out of first — by downing Minneapolis, 3-2. Tail-end Toledo split with Kansas City, winning the first game, 4-3, when Jerry White doubled in the deciding tally in the last of the ninth, and losing the nightcap, 7-3.

Milwaukee's doubleheader at Columbus was rained out.

KING THEODORE WILLIAMS ADDS 11 POINTS TO AVERAGE; SOX WIN TWO

By JACK HAND
(AP Sports Writer)

Thumping Teddy Williams is baseball's man of the hour—almost certain to be named most valuable player in the American league if the Boston Red Sox cop the big prize.

Adding 11 points to his batting average with one afternoon's effort on seven hits in nine times at bat, the sharp-eyed slugger with the limber wrists is tops in batting at .365 and ranks first in runs scored, runs batted in, total hits and home runs. It's a good thing he never took up base stealing.

Williams hit for the cycle in yesterday's second game triumph over St. Louis, 7-4, topping a single, double and triple with his 27th home run, a 400-foot drive well into the right field stands at Fenway park.

A double and a brace of singles by Williams drove in one of the runs Dave Ferriss needed to record his 15th victory of the season by a 5-0 score.

Just when the Yankees were beginning to make some menacing gestures with five straight victorious nine-inning pitching jobs, they collapsed under an eight-run inning engineered by the White Sox in the second game. Floyd Bevens had hurled and batted the home club to a 3-2 opening nod with his two-run homer off Ed Lopat but Chicago's anemic hitters climbed all over starter Al Gettel, Joe Page and Jake Wade for their biggest inning of the year and a 9-3 verdict.

Detroit blew a chance to pick up ground on New York by losing to Philadelphia A's 4-3 in the first of two. It was the second time the A's had twisted the Bengal's tail in 12 meetings, breaking an 11-game losing streak to Detroit. Even Hank Greenberg's 23rd homer with a man on couldn't save the issue. The world champs got even in the nightcap, slugging Lum Harris and two successors for an 11-7 edge in a game cut to seven innings by darkness.

Washington edged out Cleveland twice, 2-1 and 7-5, although the Tribe rushed Bobby Feller to the rescue in the finale.

Howie Pollet threw a four-hitter at the Boston Braves in the first game but needed Stan Musial's two-run homer to defeat Johnny Niggeling, 2-1; Erv Dusak's circuit clout with two on eased Harry Brecheen's task in the 8-4 second tilt triumph over ex-Card Mort Cooper.

Vic Lombardi and Hank Behrman recorded wins over Pittsburgh as the Dodgers continued to show encouraging signs of snapping out of their slump.

Lombardi blanked the Bucs with three hits, the best mound job of the day, 3-0, but Behrman required some bullpen help from Hal Gregg and an inside-the-park homer by Carl Furillo with a man on to sink the Pirates, 6-5.

Chicago set a new paid attendance record at Wrigley field with a turnout of 45,615 but the Cubs could do no better than split with the Phillies.

After Ewell Blackwell had whitewashed New York with five hits, 5-0, in the curtain raiser, the Cincinnati Reds succumbed to the slants of long Johnny Gee, making his first start after a year's retirement.

Mansfield pounded B. Ernst for 18 hits and ran up a comfortable 8 to 3 lead in the eighth inning. However, Galion gave Jimmy Lymper's team a slight scare in the ninth with a three run rally.

Glasscock and Miller divided the Tigers mound duties and each permitted three safe clouts.

Mansfield cracked the scoring ice in the sixth inning with a pair of runs while Carey came back in its half of the frame to score. Bill McKee and Uhlich each had two hits to pace the five-blow Mansfield attack.

95,000 WATCH BIG SKY SHOW OVER WEEK-END

Sunday Crowd Estimated at 75,000 as Throngs Thrill at Aerial Performance.

And they weren't disappointed. The weather was clear as that newest fighter streeked across the field at speeds of 500 miles an hour and above.

Appearing on yesterday's program only was a sailplane demonstration by Frederick Tietzel, 25-year-old Ohio State University student.

Tietzel put his motorless ship through a series of spirals, loops, wing-overs and lazy eights on his way down after cutting loose from the tow-plane at 4000 feet.

He dived past the speakers stand at 120 miles per hour and finished off his performance with a short run spot landing.

In his spare time Tietzel is a civilian instructor at the Army Glider school at Columbus. He flew an Army designated TG4-A glider.

Three of the country's ace stunt fliers "Woody" Edmonson, Beverly Howard and Mike Murphy again turned in top-notch aerobatic performances.

At one time during his show Edmonson went through 13 complete rolls while swinging a 360 degree arc, while Howard's crowning stunt consisted of doing a dead-stick inverted glide and swinging over in the last few feet above the field to land on one wheel.

Muhphy's performance was again marked by his snap precision stunt movements.

Dawn Patrol Returns.

Over 100 Ohio Dawn patrol planes visited the Mansfield airport yesterday for the second time within three months. Members of the Dawn Patrol located all over Ohio fly to some field within the state each Sunday morning during the summer months before breakfast.

In addition to the Dawn Patrol planes 26 other private planes were checked into the port. Heaviest flow of air traffic into the port took place between 9 and 11 a. m., registration personnel said.

Cherries Flown In.

A feature on yesterday's airshow was the landing of 7500 pounds of Bing cherries from Wenatchee, Wash., for the Central Fruit and Grocery company of Mansfield.

The cherries were flown across country by a National Skyway Freight corporation plane piloted by R. Headman and W. J. Hurley.

Leaving Wenatchee at 7 p. m. Saturday Mansfield time the DC-3 winged her way into Mansfield at 8:45 a. m. yesterday after stops at Billings, Mont., Watertown, S. D., and Chicago, Ill.

Two of the country's leading commercial airlines brought their big passenger liners to the port yesterday to give prospective Mansfield air-travelers a view of the ships that may be stopping at the port on regular cross country flights.

Uncounted thousands of people passed through the United Airlines "Mainliner", and the American Airlines "Flagship" before the doors were closed to them shortly before 5 p. m.

Remaining at the airport last night after the assemblage of planes from Wright Field had taken off for their home base was the huge B-19A.

The big flying laboratory was flown into the Mansfield airport by Lt. Col. R. G. Ruegg when the control tower was temporarily out of operation.

Lt. Col. Ruegg and the B-19A headed the list of Army ground exhibit planes which were furnished by Headquarters Air Materiel Command, Wright Field.

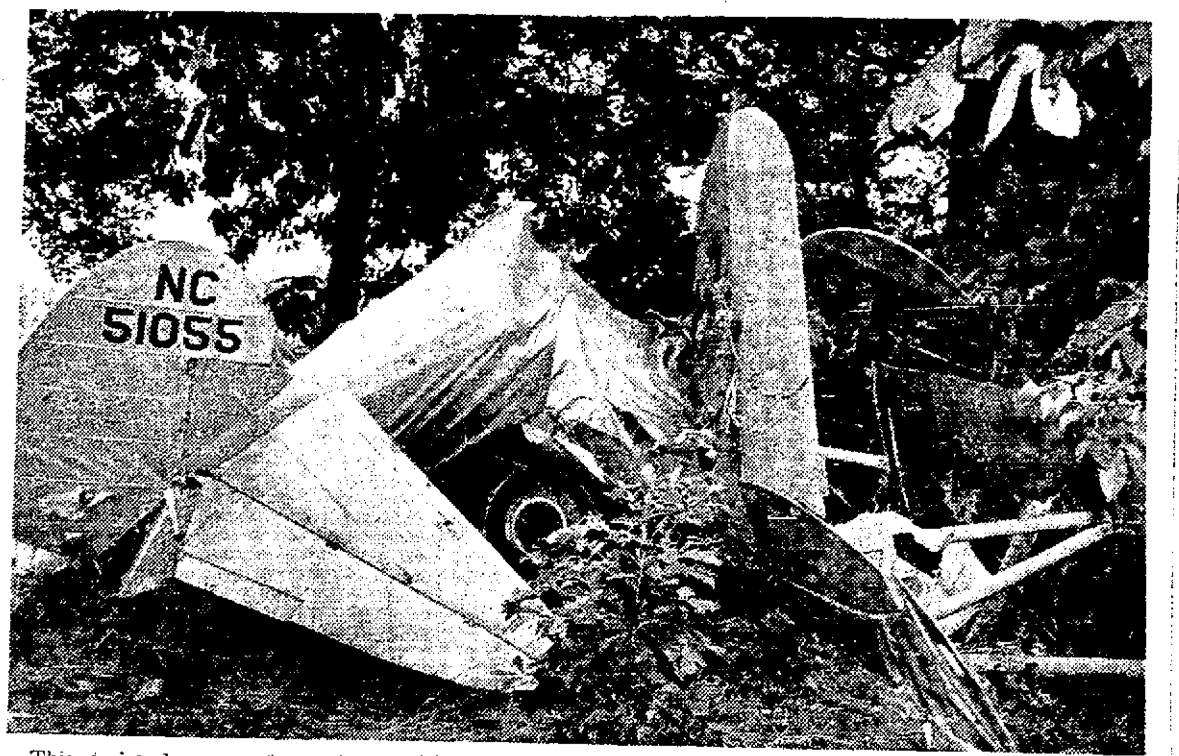
Plane Crashes In Tree Near Ashland



This twisted mass of wreckage is the plane, piloted by Walter G. Bachman of Ashland, which crashed into a tree west of Ashland yesterday. Bachman, a war veteran and Ashland college student, is in critical condition in Samaritan hospital, Ashland he saw the crash. He immediately hurried to the scene of the accident, where he found Mazzoto struggling to pull Bachman from the plane, which lay against the tree, a twisted mass of wreckage.

"Only God could have given me the strength to pull Bachmann from the wreckage," Mazzoto said.

Bachmann was pinned in the plane and could not have got out by himself, Dr. Shilling said.

"Mazzoto probably saved Bachmann's life," he added.

The pilot was rushed to Samaritan hospital by Dr. Shilling, where he was given emergency treatment.

According to the eye witnesses, Bachmann crashed into the tree when he attempted a loop.

The plane, a Boeing PT-13, an army surplus plane owned by the Ashland airport, was left at the scene of the accident, pending an investigation by CAA authorities. Authorities had not investigated the crash as yet, Ashland airport officials said this morning.

Bachmann, an expert pilot credited with 300 hours flying time, in this type of plane, received his discharge from the army just a year ago. He received his basic training at Lincoln Army airfield, Lincoln, Neb., and had been stationed at Dale Mabry Field, Florida, where he was discharged as a flight officer.

In ancient Egypt, if a gentleman lost his life or an eye as a result of an operation, the surgeon's hand was cut off in retaliation.

Bulk of the accidents yesterday occurred in traffic bound to or from Mansfield's airport dedication and sky show which attracted 95,000 spectators from the city and statewide points yesterday and Saturday. Officials reported highways jammed for miles around the city yesterday when 75,000 of the 95,000 visitors converged upon municipal airport.

A narrow escape from death or injury was experienced by the families of John Schampier, 28, 201 Hedges street, and Charles E. Maglott, 22, Galion, when their autos sideswiped on U. S. Route 30-S eight miles west of Mansfield Saturday night.

Riding with each of the drivers was his wife and infant child.

Schampier, charged with unsafe operation, was fined $10 and costs and had his driver's license suspended for 60 days in municipal court this morning.

Six persons were injured in a head-on collision of autos driven by Frank P. Hayes, Caledonia, R. D. 1, and Earl Bell, Logan, on U. S. Route 30-N five miles west of Mansfield at midnight Saturday.

State patrolmen reported Bell suffered a deep cut on his right knee and Hayes received numerous cuts and bruises. Four other persons were injured slightly.

Minor Crashes Reported.

In a two-car collision on Stewart road north of U. S. Route 42 at 5 p. m. yesterday Robert Erndt, 21, of Mansfield, R. D. 3, received a scalp wound and numerous bruises, patrolmen reported.

In another auto collision, Merrill Zirkle, 17, Galion, R. D. 1, suffered lacerations to his right elbow at the intersection of North Adams and East Fourth streets yesterday afternoon.

John Atwell, whose address officers did not obtain, was struck by an auto on East Sixth street near North Main Saturday night. Atwell was treated for slight head and left arm injuries and then held in the city jail under a charge of intoxication.

Injured at the airport, reportedly when a motorcycle fell over on her, was Mrs. Lester Miller, 40, of Elyria. She was treated for lacerations on her arm at General hospital and released.

Mrs. Pearl Ziegler, 48, of 147 East First street, was treated for lacerations to her face at General hospital after her auto left the road and struck a stump north of Shelby yesterday morning, the sheriff's department reported.

In a four-car jam-up on North Main street road yesterday afternoon Mrs. J. P. Moore, Plymouth, suffered a sprained ankle, the sheriff's department said.

Grateful Fliers Stage Super Spectacle for 75,000 Crowd

ing Star" maneuvers, due to her extreme speed, that it was easy to lose sight of the little streamlined plane, for a brief second as she swung about to return for another pass at the field.

The silent approach of the P-80, also due to her high speed, probably impressed the crowd as much as her speed and lightning maneuvering. She was almost overhead or abreast before any sound was audible.

Although not using as spectacular a ship as the P-80 the Navy and Marine pilots put on an even finer precision and workmanlike performance than on the opening day.

Besides duplicating most of their formation flying and aeorbatics of the opening day they also executed touch and go landings, expertly.

Pilots Say, "Thanks."

Expressing their appreciation the pilots said: "We've never been received anywhere like we've been received here in Mansfield—most of the pilots don't want to leave."

Those words of genuine appreciation for the elaborate "off duty" entertainment schedule mapped by the airport dedication committees for the visiting pilots, came unanimously from navy, marine and army flying personnel at the close of the aerial show yesterday.

A higher ceiling and improved flying conditions over Saturday's show, also helped the fliers put over one of the best army and navy air force shows to be given in this part of the country.

Since individual thanks from the visiting pilots was impossible because of their participation in the demonstration, the appreciation for Mansfield's receptance of them was voiced by the leaders and announcers of the three forces, First Lt. Theodore G. Edwards, B-29 Flying Fortress pilot, Lt. I. L. Kruger, announcer for the Marine Corsair demonstration, and Lt. James Laws, member of the crew of Navy Squadron 42 of the carrier, Sicily, who followed the navy aerial exhibit via the microphone.

The weekend entertainment afforded the pilots started with a swim and golf party at Westbrook Country club at 5 p. m. Friday and included a buffet dinner at the club.

Saturday, the pilots breakfasted at the Mansfield-Leland hotel, lunched at the Sky club, were featured in the reception at the elaborate airport restaurant and were guests at a dinner dance at the Mansfield-Leland hotel in the evening.

Mansfield Becomes 'Air Minded' City

NO PREVIOUS event in Mansfield's history attracted such universal attention from the people of this community as did the dedication of the new airport Saturday and Sunday, with yesterday's crowd—estimated at approaching 75,000—the largest ever drawn together at a public assemblage in this north-central Ohio area.

Realization was fully up to anticipation, in the impressiveness of the dedicatory ceremonies, the magnificence of aerial exhibitions, participation of notable figures in the field of aeronautics, and the opportunity given to get a close-up view of a large variety of planes.

All in all, the airport dedication and sky show was an outstanding success and reflects much credit on each of those who had a part in the careful planning, which involved infinite detail, and in which every large and small requirement was given careful attention.

Most difficult of all, perhaps, was the expanding of city and county traffic-handling facilities to the extent of directing the many thousands of private automobiles to and from the airport without any more serious difficulty than sometimes long delays due to necessarily slow movement of miles of cars headed toward the airport in two northbound lanes.

These delays, however, were taken in good spirit by a great majority of motorists, and the lesson in careful driving that was thus gained may prove beneficial in reducing this county's accident rate, which is now above the state average.

Those who attended either the Saturday dedication or the Sunday sky show can scarcely fail to have gained new ideas of the rapid progress being made in aviation and of the important part this modern airport is destined to play in the future growth and further industrial and mercantile development of Mansfield.

An intriguing thought in connection with the airport dedication and sky show is the number of children who were in attendance, coupled with realization that for them, in their later years, air transportation will be accepted in the same matter of fact way that the various means of land and water transportation are now looked upon by adults to whom aviation still possesses an element of novelty—and wonderment.

Pearl Harbor 'Blame' Still In Doubt

LIKE earlier investigations of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, December 7, 1941, the congressional committee's majority and minority reports, as issued Saturday, leave a feeling that tragic blundering was the main factor in making such a successful onslaught possible—without clearing the point of who was actually at fault.

The committee majority places blame on Maj. Gen. Short, army commander in Hawaii, and Rear Adm. Husband E. Kimmel, naval commander, but lightens its censure by expressing belief that they committed only "errors of judgment" and were not guilty of "dereliction of duty." An earlier investigating commission, headed by then Supreme Court Justice Roberts, had charged dereliction of duty against the Hawaiian commanders.

The new report, as presented by the committee majority of eight members, also clears the late President Roosevelt and his administrative associates of any blame for the Pearl Harbor disaster, while the minority report of two committee members includes the late president, the secretaries of war and navy and the chiefs of staff of army and navy operations among those who "failed to perform the responsibilities indispensably essential to the defense of Pearl Harbor."

A possibly inescapable suggestion of political bias appears in both of the reports and just what has been gained by the long-drawn-out series of investigations—leaving the Pearl Harbor story still incomplete—cannot be readily understood.

Some committee recommendations, however, if carried through, may serve to guard against recurrence of such a state of lethargy as existed just before the Pearl Harbor attack.

Among these is unity of command at all military and naval outposts; integration of army and navy intelligence agencies, and tightening of United States espionage laws, which have been disclosed to be dangerously lax.

Future historians are likely to find a rich field for further delving into the Pearl Harbor debacle, but for the present there is appearance of many matters of more immediate concern to engage the attention of congress, the administration, and the people of the United States in general, than to use valuable time in further review of the Pearl Harbor debacle.

Unfinished Business Holds Congress

HOPE for adjournment of congress soon after mid-July has gone glimmering, according to Washington observers, and the more pessimistic have an idea that September will be the earliest time for wind-up of legislation considered essential.

House delay in action on the British loan and long-drawn-out quibbling over the OPA have held up consideration of other important matters, and three-day recesses of the senate are planned by Majority Leader Barkley in order to give the house a chance to catch up.

This is all very disconcerting to senators and congressmen who feel the need for considerable "fence-mending" before the November elections.

New Use for Aerial Photography

A NEW science, aerogeology, is rapidly making obsolete the traditional and colorful mining prospector and his burro. A combination of the airplane and newly developed quick color film now makes it possible to detect mineral deposits in far-flung and inaccessible mountain regions.

Color variations in soil, rock and tree growths hint at mineral content. A magnometer, used in war to detect submerged submarines, can be used to estimate mineral content of both land and under-water areas, according to an article in the July issue of Science Illustrated.

Because many of the known mineral and oil deposits are already worked out, airborne prospecting becomes an important and practical commercial aid.

Conflicting Opinions Expressed About OPA.

BOISE, Idaho—It may only lead to bloodshed, as the saying goes, but for once the elected lawmakers of these United States seem to be somewhat accurately representing the actual mood of the masses who sent them to Washington.

That is to say, when it comes to settling permanently the fate of OPA, there appears to be proportionately the same amount of confusion, contradiction and conflicting opinion across the country as is currently being kicked around on Capitol Hill.

As the third week of battle rages over OPA's body, it would be exceedingly gratifying at this point to step forward briskly and report whether the average citizen prefers to pump blood plasma or embalming fluid into the corpse's veins.

But unfortunately, this roving reporter has come to the reluctant conclusion that it would require a national referendum to resolve that riddle.

And even if such a plebiscite were possible, no two groups would agree on how the question should be put!

That barren conclusion is the result of blending the bulk of comments collected in half a dozen western states during the past three weeks.

In Idaho, the situation seems much the same as elsewhere—and what does Idaho think?

Well, State OPA Administrator Walt Lockwood has been standing pat, certain that his job will soon be there again. His 22 clerks continued to punch the time-clock, but as day succeeded day with no settlement in sight, they began to cast coy glances at other paying positions.

So much for the official employes involved. Elsewhere, the advertising and editorial columns of various state newspapers showed the situation with startling clarity.

In the beginning, merchants leaped on the band-wagon, pledging in advertisements that their "prices will not be increased." They were, however, careful to add in each instance, "except where necessary to cover increased costs."

Concerning their own line of business, most of them expressed delight at OPA's demise. The minority view was that it should be revived, but with drastic alterations.

However, strangely shifting their weight to the other side of the scales, almost all merchants agreed that rent ceilings should have been retained!

Newspaper editorial opinion varied. Editor Victor Lemon of the Wendell Irrigationist warned, "Just wait and see. Unless another OPA or substitute is enacted, the U. S. is in for one of the greatest periods of inflation it has ever known."

Nevertheless, there was more editorial cheering than mourning at first. The Weiser Signal-American asserted that "merchants are as anxious as consumers to hold prices down. . . . All pledged themselves to hold the price line." And Editor B. M McIntyre of the Buhl Herald thundered, "those who may have thought (the veto) would start a price attack on John Public did not reckon with the sound judgment and common sense of the average American businessman."

So went the press, so went the comments of average persons. None could quite agree.

THE GUIDE SEEMS TO BE LOST, TOO

UNRRA Seeks to Perpetuate Self

By RAYMOND MOLEY

WHEN President Roosevelt organized the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration in 1942, one of its main purposes was war propaganda. In splitting off German satellites like Italy and Bulgaria, free food was to be used as a strong incentive. Through no fault of UNRRA, this task did not succeed. In the midst of military operations, a civil organization had no chance.

The real work of UNRRA began after the fall of Germany. Its work assumed importance then because of the food emergency, the severity of which had not been anticipated. UNRRA concentrated not on occupied regions or financially strong liberated nations, but in places like Greece, Poland, Hungary, Rumania, Italy and China.

There were inevitable complaints, but, in balance, the verdict must be that the organization, formerly headed by Herbert H. Lehman and now by Fiorello H. La Guardia, did a good job. About half its rescue work was directed to agriculture and agricultural products. It sent fertilizers and farm implements and even tackled such projects as the rechanneling of the Yangtze river.

Now there seems to be a determination within UNRRA to perpetuate itself. This is the way of all government organizations.

Herbert Hoover has said, since his return, that the world has fortunately escaped dire famine this year and that the situation in Europe is so favorable that deliveries on the free account can be ended by September.

He made a proposal to this effect at a meeting of the food and agricultural organization of the U.N., a group headed by British nutritionists. Mr. Hoover said, further, that charity from abroad tends to waste and to the weakening of self-sufficiency. He added, however, that relief for children is a responsibility of richer countries.

Mr. La Guardia did not agree. He said, among other things: "If, out of this conference, the world receives a definite, wonderful concrete plan of operation for an international controlled supervision of food production and the disposition of food, carrying out the ideals for which Sir John Orr has devoted his entire life—if that happens then the security council of the U. N. at their bi-monthly meetings will be able to spend most of their time on the golf links of Long Island."

Mr. La Guardia went on to suggest something like an international New Deal. There should be, he said, an international food bank to which surpluses from some countries should be delivered and from which needy countries might be fed. The program would go on for some years.

But there is no real reason to feel that such a pooling of resources will be necessary. Mr. Hoover says that Europe's crop will be up to 90 per cent of normal this year. It is not anticipated that starvation will face the world in 1947.

The real issue between the Hoover philosophy and that of La Guardia, Wallace and others is between a measured policy of helping only in emergencies and bringing living standards up through a planned international economy.

This, of course, has been the domestic issue in this country between free enterprise and the extreme New Deal.

There is need for international action to help in developing self-sufficiency through improved agriculture in backward places. But this does not call for the continuation of the UNRRA, a war emergency body.

The best feature of the U. N. is its allowance for international economic and social planning. Such continuing activities belong to the U. N. In the realm of emergency feeding, there is a successor to the combined food board in the International Emergency Food Council, which will go on to the end of 1947. The feeding of needy children should be carried on by a specific welfare body, preferably on a non-government basis.

The UNRRA should end with the present emergency. That means at the end of 1946.

Should the Supreme Court "Legislate"?

WASHINGTON — Friends and admirers of Justice Hugo L. Black of the Supreme Court have taxed me with being unfair to him in a recent column. Because I make every effort in this space to be fair and accurate, I want to examine the charge they bring.

In the column on Justice Black, written shortly after Justice Robert H. Jackson made his public statement questioning Black's integrity, mention was made of a dinner given early last year in Black's honor "by a group representing labor and left-wing politics." It was also said that among those who eulogized Black were "the legal representatives of several large labor organizations" who, a few days later, appeared before the Supreme Court to argue cases for their unions.

The latter statement was inaccurate. While Joseph Padway, counsel for the AFL, and Lee Pressman, counsel for the CIO, were among the sponsors for the dinner, they did not speak, I have been informed. There are those who give Pressman a large share of the credit for inspiring the dinner. Others say this is not true.

In any event, the dinner had a broader representation than I indicated. The chairman was Assistant Secretary of the Interior Oscar L. Chapman. The toastmaster was Sen. Alben Barkley of Kentucky. One of the sponsors was Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was a patroness and speaker. Mrs. Harry S. Truman was a patroness, and the then vice president, who is now president, sent a message apologizing because he could not be present and warmly praising Justice Black. If I have done an injury to Justice Black in making that dinner seem something other than what it was, I am sorry for it.

Looking back at the record of the dinner is illuminating. Not the least interesting eulogy was pronounced by Fred Vinson, who was then economic stabilizer and is now chief justice of the United States.

Analyzing Black's career, Vinson praised him for his courage.

"Expediency would have counselled him as a new-robed judge, to take refuge in the dignified anonymity which a lesser man might seek to find on the bench. Instead, he straightway challenged in unequivocal tones many of the widely accepted juristic canons of the day."

This was the theme of most of speeches in praise of the justice who has become such a controversial figure. Speakers praised Justice Black for his craftsmanship in the law and also for his championship, in the senate and on the Supreme Court, of civil liberties and social justice. They lauded him for carrying his convictions onto the bench.

It is precisely that which the "strict constructionists," including Justice Jackson, accuse Black of doing. They charge him with legislating on the bench instead of merely interpreting the statutes in accord with the Constitution.

This is the heart of the long quarrel over the Supreme Court.

Some justices, such as Joseph P. Bradley and Joseph Story, sought to turn the court away from legislation.

In our own time, that was the supreme effort of the late Chief Justice Harlan F. Stone who, in repeated dissents, reproved the old court for killing New Deal laws by voting their "economic predilections." In a famous opinion, Stone said in effect that the judges' only restraint is "our own sense of self-restraint."

Very few of the judges in our history have had this self-restraint. That is why, in Adams' phrase, the court becomes an upper chamber, and it is why the quarrel over the role of the court is so bitter

Dave Boone Says:

THE SENATE and house conferees probed around and found a new OPA. It will give America three Bowles for one.

A three-man board will decide whether ceilings go back on meat and other foods August 20—or before, or not at all. It now becomes a question of whether Harry Truman will veto the idea of OPA triplets.

A trio making OPA decisions should bring three times as much confusion and indecision. A lot depends on whether the board members are meat eaters. A couple of vegetarians on the board could make things so much tougher.

I don't know why August 20 was picked. Probably because it will take at least a month to find three men who can read the new rules and understand 'em, in part,

Barkley Threatens to Resign Over OPA.

WASHINGTON—Patient Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky hasn't blown off steam since he stampeded the senate against FDR's veto of the last war tax bill. But at a luncheon the other day he indicated to friends that the pot again was beginning to boil.

In fact, Barkley stated categorically that he would resign if President Truman vetoed the present OPA bill.

He said he was tired of living on a treadmill, that the present OPA bill was the best he could get out of the senate, and if the president wouldn't accept it, he would resign as majority leader.

The serious and protracted illness of the senator's wife and the recent disclosure that his son was employed by the Erie Basin war profiteers have increased Barkley's already heavy burden. Senate friends hope, however, that either the price-control problem will be ironed out or that Barkley will reconsider.

The Barkley conversation took place just prior to a luncheon commemorating the 200th anniversary of Princeton university, attended by Senators Alexander Smith of New Jersey and Joe Guffey of Pennsylvania, both Princeton men. Admiral Ernie King (Annapolis) and Senator Barkley (Emory college, Ga.) though not Princeton grads, were also present.

Truman Sticks With OPA.

Three farm officials, Albert S. Goss, master of the National Grange, together with President Quentin Reynolds and John Davis of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, came away from a White House conference with a 50-50 score the other day.

Truman agreed with them that one agricultural expert should be among the three members of the Economic Council to be set up under the Full Employment Act. But he disagreed when Grange boss Goss tried to convert him on the OPA.

"I don't want you to think I'm slipping, Mr. President," grinned the farm leader as the meeting was about to break up. "Every time we meet, we discuss a certain subject. So if I came here today and didn't mention it, you'd probably think something was wrong."

"Ah—the OPA, guessed Truman immediately. "What have you got on your mind?"

Goss replied that he still had hopes of converting the president to the idea that maximum production could only be achieved by relaxing price controls.

"My organization wants to see OPA continued," said the Grange leader, "but with limitations that will enable the farmer to produce more."

Goss contended that the shortage of fertilizer was attributable to price ceilings; also that much of the last hay crop was lost because of the delay in granting baling wire manufacturers a price boost to encourage wire production.

Truman replied that he had heard the same arguments many times before and that he realized OPA's management had not been "100 per cent perfect."

However, he said he had not changed his position one iota from the views set forth in his veto message on the first OPA extension bill sent him by congress.

"We must have down-the-line price controls," concluded the president. "It is wrong to make specific exemptions in the law favoring certain producers, as some factions in congress are attempting to do."

Here's How Talmadge Won In Georgia.

ATLANTA — An interesting story of political intrigue, not new, lies behind the victory of Gene Talmadge here.

It involves big financial and industrial interests some with roots elsewhere, largely in the east. They knew what they wanted, they played for it cleverly, and they got it. They used demagogic Gene Talmadge as a pawn and his "white supremacy" ranting for sound effects. Their purpose was to stop progress here such as Gov. Ellis Arnall has achieved. The irony of the governor's election last week was that a majority of voters did not want Gene Talmadge again.

He won with a minority. But Georgia nonetheless is stuck with him for four years, beginning next January.

How this comes about should be explained to people elsewhere. The explanation is due also to the majority of voters who rose up in vain to turn back the menace of Talmadgeism so well known from his three other terms as governor. It is mixed up too, in the plot of the big boys behind the scenes.

The explanation is in the county unit systtem, whereby election is not determined by popular vote, but by the unit vote of counties. The counties with the smallest population have two unit votes each, while those of the largest population, including Atlanta's Fulton county, have only six.

This system, which goes back into the last century, was to give a preponderant voice to rural and farm sections. The idea was to prevent domination by the cities. Georgia is the only state which still has it.

For the sake of the state it was a bad time certainly for it to work that way. But it worked out nicely for the big interests who wanted Gene Talmadge.

These interests — the Georgia Power company, the most potent influence in state politics, big textile mills, railroads and a number of banks threw their invisible support back of Talmadge against the candidate backed by Governor Arnall. This was James V. Carmichael, young lawyer, former legislator, who led in the popular vote.

They poured money into the campaign, great chunks. Nobody knows how much, but it ran into several hundred thousand dollars, it is estimated.

The power company, particularly, is potent in small county political machines through lawyers it retains in them for obvious purposes.

The reason for their activity also is obvious. The unions are trying to organize the workers here. Talmadge is bitterly anti-labor, and once locked workers in concentration camps. The railroads are bitter at Gov. Arnall because of his suit in the supreme court charging conspiracy to fix rates and discriminate against the south.

Big interests generally want a low wage economy and subservent workers. They don't want workers organized, which makes them more independent economically and politically.

So the people of Georgia, who showed they don't want Gene Talmadge, have him again on their necks. And the big boys sit back and smile smugly, as they sit about in the cool of the evening at their country clubs.

That's the Georgia story. Unfortunately it's the story in other parts of the south and elsewhere.

Farmer's Diary: "Beauties of Sunrise."

NOT ONLY what I see and enjoy in nature concerns me . . . but also how much I miss. If I slumber through an early morning, I miss the beauty of the sunrise.

Purple tints and streamers of rose and pink stretch upward from one central point upon the eastern horizon . . . then quietly rising power of light that overflows and blazes warmer until it has flooded and blinded and burned away all but the remembrance of night.

It is wonderful to let the sunrise become a part of me. . . . To feel those starlike pointed rays penetrate my being, cool and vagrant first, then bathing my poor senses with the warmth of another world.

It is a pleasing thought to stand at early morning upon some hill when the valley is asleep and observe the progress of the slowly advancing day—from first hint of light until the full panorama of bright sunshine.

No breeze is abroad. Nature is at rest. Even the cricket beneath the stone at my feet has no voice. The owl, perched in a scrub oak, blinks disgustedly at the growing brilliance of the east. Blocks of lichens reflect a silvery sky lustre upon their roughened surface. Dew wet berries show a fertile misty covering of gray upon their ripening purple cones.

A chipmunk comes timidly from his burrow, peers rapidly about, then faces squarely toward the warm level rays of light. A solitary crow is mute upon a dead elm branch. A hollow trunk with its open end lying toward the east wears the tracery of a dewy web meshed and magnified across its lengthy cavity.

Long narrow zones of fog are on the valley floor—and above, the hillside hedges are glorified by depths of greenery, lighted and shadowed.

Fragrances of wheat fields, greening and blooming clover, and earthy swamp land come distinctly to my notice . . . and where I stand the eerie haunting wild-grape odor is tantalizing, so that I am wordless to express such an exquisite bit of living.

F. B. Poling, a Wood Worker For 60 Years, Gets 'Kick' Out of Job

Has Worked With Lumber Since Childhood

F. B. POLING

A wood worker since childhood, Frank B. Poling, 75, still loves the buzz of a fast saw, the smell of cut pine, and the feel of good, strong lumber in his hands.

Although he's Mansfield Lumber company's oldest employe from point of service and superintendent of the company's mill room, Poling still likes to pick up his tools and go to work creating "something useful."

"Wood working has been my job and my hobby for over 60 years," Poling says, and I wouldn't trade jobs with anybody in the world."

Poling came to the Mansfield Lumber company, 243 North Mulberry street, in February, 1901, over 45 years ago.

"When I first started working here," he chuckled, "I made window frames. Now I sometimes make a couple just for old time's sake."

Before coming to the Mansfield Lumber company, Poling worked for the old Richland Buggy works, building wooden bodies.

Although he has no way of telling just how many window frames, sashes and doors he's made, Poling estimated that "thousands" would be conservative."

"I've made sashes and doors for buildings all over the country," he said. "But I get my biggest kick out of seeing my work still being used here in Mansfield after more than 40 year's use."

Four years after Poling went to work for the company, a fire destroyed the entire mill. When the new mill was constructed, he was promoted to foreman and later to superintendent.

Besides wood working, Poling likes gardening. A family man, he and his wife live at 210 Harker street. He has three sons and two grandchildren.

Barclay On Bridge

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

If anybody asks you how early in the play a squeeze might be possible, tell him "on the very first trick." We hope it never happens to you, because it is not a pleasant experience, even though you may not know at the time that you are being squeezed. Not only has that happened, on rare occasions, but unfortunates have been squeezed first by their partner's lead and then a second time by the declarer, through a lead of the identical suit from which they made their initial discard.

	♠ 7 5 ♥ Q J 9 8 4 ♦ 8 5 4 3 2 ♣ K
♠ 8 6 4 3 2 ♥ None ♦ K Q 10 9 7 6 ♣ Q 9	N W E S	♠ Q J 10 ♥ 10 7 6 3 2 ♦ None ♣ 8 6 5 4 3

(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South

Pass	4 ♥	Pass	6 NT

South thoroughly resented East's psychic opening bid, and showed it by his 2-No Trumps. West continued the interference effort with his diamond call, but South's next bid, of the first opponent's suit, forced North to say something. When South heard it, he preferred a leap into a No Trump slam instead of hearts because of his 150 aces.

When West led the diamond K and the dummy went down, South could count only nine absolutely sure tricks—two in spades, four in hearts, one in diamonds and two in clubs. Yet he made a grand slam by virtue of gaudy breaks.

The first luck was that East was squeezed on the opening trick. Then came the club K, heart A, club A, J, 10 and 7. On the 7 East was squeezed again. To hold his hearts, he discarded the spade 10. Then followed the heart K, Q, and J, the spade A and K and finally the spade 9, which had been established by the second squeeze.

Notice that any discard by East on the first trick would have set up a trick for South, after which the latter could later have squeezed East again with the suit on which he made his first discard.

Tomorrow's Problem.

(Dealer: East. East-West vulnerable.)

After South's last diamond stopper is gone, and he is scoring his three club tricks, what two discards should West make to foil the No Trump game contract?

Bedtime Stories

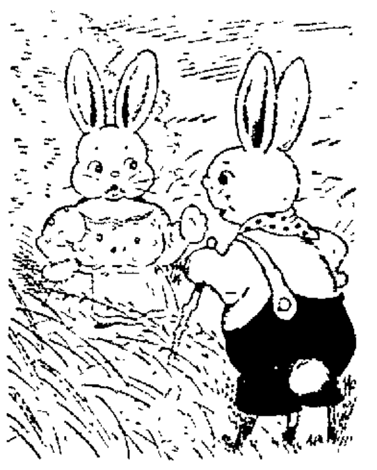
—By Thornton W. Burgess

The safest place you'll always find
Is that not in another's mind.
—Mrs. Peter Rabbit.

The Old Briar-patch is a small island in the Green Meadows. It is only a little way as a Rabbit runs from the edge of the Old Pasture. It covers a slight rise of ground so that it is just enough above the level of the Green Meadows for those living therein to see over the latter and who comes and goes and if these be friends or foes.

Shrubs and bushes of many kinds crowd the Old Brier-patch in places. In other parts they have been unable to persist and have given away to strangling masses of the tangled greenbriar. Here and there a young tree thrusts its way above, inviting feathered folk flying over to make a friendly call and rest a bit. Here and there along the edge wild roses are a joy to all who pass in early summer. Vines creep and climb. Some lie in wait to trip careless feet and others with hooked claws clutch and hold those who are not welcome there.

Within are many little paths that cross and recross. They lead through the thickest bramble-tangles, becoming tunnels through which none bigger than those who made them may pass. They lead to secret places wherein to hide in time of danger. In the middle is an old underground house dug by Johnny Chuck's grandfather long ago when the Old Briar-patch was little more than a few bushes and seeds of the vines and brambles had not yet been dropped there by feathered folk or blown there by Merry Little Breezes.



"You talk as if you think I would hurt my own babies," grumbled Peter.

Now and then Farmer Brown frowns at the Old Briar-patch and calls it waste land, and threatens to clear away all the bushes and young trees and vines and make it a part of the Green Meadows, and so of some use.

Then the freckled face of Farmer Brown's boy becomes sober and a pucker of worry creases his forehead. "But it is of some use right now!" he protests. "It is of more use than ever it would be just grass. It is the safest place anywhere around for some of the most useful of our friends in feathers and fur. You know it is." Farmer Brown's eyes twinkle and he says, "Do you think Peter Rabbit is useful?" Tommy grins and says that Peter is fun to have around, and Farmer Brown guesses that they won't do anything about the Old Briar-patch just yet.

Most of those paths in the Old Briar-patch are private little paths, Petter Rabbit's. They were made by him. His sharp teeth cut them through the briars and brambles. A few were made by Mrs. Peter, but most of them had already been made when Peter led her there to live. From that time the Old Briar-patch had become the dear Old Briar-patch, not only to Peter and Mrs. Peter but to many others who had found safety there and made their homes there. From it many little folk in fur and feathers had gone out into the Great World to make homes of their own. Petter Rabbit's children, some of Jimmy Skunk's children, children of Danny Meadow Mouse, and the young of many feathered folk who through the years had nested there. Once Bob White and Mrs. Bob led a big family out from just within the edge. There are no more useful feathered folk in all the Great World than the Bob Whites.

"I suppose Fuzzy, my dear," said Peter to Mrs. Peter (she was Miss Fuzzytail before she became Mrs. Peter) "from your anxious looks that we have a new family, and as usual you haven't let me know where the nursery is." He sounded a little peevish.

Mrs. Peter admitted that it was so. "We have five babies. While they are helpless they are safer if no one but myself knows where they are. It will be time enough for you to become acquainted with them when I bring them home to the dear Old Briar-patch," said she.

"You talk as if you think I would hurt my own babies," grumbled Peter. "You have queer ideas. You certainly have. Other folks have their babies in the dear Old Briar-patch because they think it the safest place in all the Great World and you have your nursery somewhere else. It doesn't make sense. It doesn't make sense at all."

The next story: "Mrs. Peter Tries To Be Patient."

An Exotic Flower for Midsummer Bloom

By DEAN HALLIDAY

Centaurea are showy annual and perennial herbs largely European in origin. These attractive, exotic-appearing plants are useful in sunny borders and for use as cut flowers. The plants are hardy and will thrive in almost any ordinary good soil. They also are remarkably resistant to disease.

The variety Centaurea macrocephala is especially showy having large thistle-like golden yellow flowers, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. The buds themselves can be used for artistic flower arrangements indoors.

Centaurea provides wanted midsummer flowers, blooming as it does in July and August. The plants grow to be 3 feet or more in height.

The plants can be transplanted in either spring or autumn. They should be set about 8 inches apart and look best when planted in groups of three. They will require dividing and replanting every three years.

Centaurea americana, or Basket-flower, is an annual variety which grows to a height of 6 feet. It bears solitary thistle-like flowers generally of rose or flesh color often 5 inches across.

Among the perennial varieties is Centaurae cineraria, commonly known as Dusty Miller. It grows 2 feet in height with woolly, white foliage. Its large flowers are yellow or purple in color.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Try and Stop Me

—By Bennet Cerf

Frazer spent his first vacation in twenty years in the White Mountains. On his fourth day, his wife finally wheedled him into deserting the hotel lobby and going for a hike in the woods.

He was back in an hour, his sports ensemble in tatters, and his face and arms marked with a dozen abrasions. "A snake chased me," he gasped, still terrified.

"But darling," said Mrs. Frazer, "the snakes around here aren't poisonous."

"So what?" barked Frazer. "As long as they can make me jump off a fifty foot cliff, they don't have to be."

Bernard Shaw story Number 6471: Shaw was eating his usual meatless dinner with a learned confrere when the restaurant's orchestra struck up a particularly noisy piece.

When, after the briefest of intermissions, it launched into an even noisier one, Shaw summoned the headwaiter. "Does this orchestra play anything on request?" he asked.

"Oh, yes sir," said the headwaiter.

"Excellent," snapped Shaw. "Kindly tell them to play dominoes."

It took S. N. Behrman 11 years to sell his first play, "The Second Man."

Name Tags Ease Dinner Introduction

By EMILY POST

The following suggests an excellent idea: "We thought we would have identification badges made to have our sales personnel wear while at work. We believe the customers like knowing them by name. The question arises as to how these should be printed. We have men, married women and unmarried women."

Any method whereby the handicap of not knowing another person's name could be overcome will surely have the grateful enthusiasm of most of us. The men's tags would read John Blank or J. Blank; married women, (Mrs.) M. Smith; unmarried women, (Miss) M. Smith. First names of women may be spelled out if preferred, but using only initials emphasizes their titles rather than their first names!

Wedding Gift to Employer.

Dear Mrs. Post: May a man's secretary send his wife a wedding present? She (the secretary) has been working for him a little less than a year, but during that time she has been friendly with both him and his bride-to-be. They are young and, on several occasions, have invited her along with them to dinner. The friendship is, however, only a business one and the wedding will be a family affair and she will not receive an invitation to it. If she may send something, should she send the present to the bride, with no mention of the groom? And would you be so kind as to suggest one or two items that would be particularly suitable?

Answer: It would be quite proper to send a present to the bride. Choose something for their house but rather specially useful to him. A cigaret box or ash receiver, or any gadget for his (their) desk.

Reveal Date of Wedding

Couple to Exchange Vows On August 24 At St. Peter's.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Wojcik, Mansfield R. D. 2, are announcing the wedding date of their daughter, Sophie, and Robert Crittenden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Zander, 378 South Main street.

Miss Wojcik and Mr. Crittenden will be united in marriage in an open church ceremony at St. Peter's Catholic church at 9:30 a. m. on August 24.

The bride-elect is a graduate of St. Peter's high school and attended the College of St. Francis in Joliet, Ill., and Ohio university.

Mr. Crittenden, a graduate of Mansfield Senior high school, was in the U. S. Marines for three years and served in the South Pacific. He is now employed at the Park avenue bakery.

Do not hang glass or china cups by their handles. They may chip or crack and finally break off.

White Haired Woman Should Be Conservative In Make Up

By MME. QUI VIVE

Upon certain matters the younger and the older generation often are at odds. But the feminine contingent are united on one subject, and that is make-up. At the age of fourteen, when a girl graduates from grammar school, she is entitled to the privilege of the lipstick. How this law came to be made, your reporter cannot tell you. But here it is. From fourteen on there is no age limit. Grannie has her cheeks tinted, lips rosy—and a sweet thing she is. No suggestion of getting on the shelf. She goes to town with the rest of the good-lookers.

The longing to be attractive was born in Mother Eve. Every daughter of the human race has that desire, feels the same way about it. The mother who does not make every effort to retain youthfulness of face and figure not only is doing herself an injustice but also is being unkind to the members of her family who can't bear to see her appear dowdy. The chase toward the beauty rainbow goes on apace. Mother and grandmother can't be left behind. They'd be lonesome with unpowdered noses, lips as is, hair wadded in a style of remote vintage.

Come on Ma, come on Grannie, beat it to the beautery!

Mothers, of course, must be a bit more conservative when laying on the complexion batik than daughters whose young faces are better able to stand the color strain.

Too many white-haired women persist in using flesh tints or natural shades of powder. On the faded or wrinkled skin these tones are too conspicuous, especially if a foundation cosmetic is used. They often impart a lavender cast to the flesh, especially if a dark toned lipstick is applied.

Skins usually darken with the birthdays and, for that reason, a fairly dark powder is best. Rachelle, with a blend of flesh, gives the skin a peachy look. We are referring to the color of the fruit, not using the word as a flattering adjective. This blend imparts a glow of warmth and freshness, lends a vivid note.

Raspberry rouge is another mistake. On the white-haired sister it appears as purplish red. If the skin is sallow, this is distinctly unbecoming.

If the skin is sallow, rouge and lipstick should be of a red that has a golden cast, an orange-red. One can use a clear red if the complexion is toned down with a dark powder. The most common mistake is to use too light a shade of powder, too dark a shade of rouge and lipstick.
